SAVING THE UNION. A Missouri Man at Last Meekly Confesses

that He Did it.

EDITOR NATIONAL TRIBUNE: I have been reading to-day some very interesting yarns by old veterans of the civil war. From these stories I gather facts that convince me that I was not the only man in the army. But while there were some other pretty good men in the service, I want to say that I was no Spring chicken myself. I am the man who struck Pat Murphy. I was born April 27, 1847. Gen. finally capture him at Appomattox. With my very efficient aid Mr. Lincoln was able have sung "Marching Through Georgia" more than 1,000 times, though I never marched through that great State in my life. I was a member of Co. C. 7th Kan. 'av., and killed as much time and as few rebels as any man in the service. I never did steal either a hoopskirt, a grindstone or a sawmill; but I have seen many men who did steal all of these useless articles may have, in a moment of passion or ppetite, stolen a chicken or a mulebut I only did it as a military necessity, and to prevent the property from falling into the hands of the enemy. Being now old, and knowing that my days are nearly numbered, I desire to confess that down in Tennessee in 1864 I picked up a hive bees and started off with it, thinking that the bees were not at home; but after going a few rods I discovered that all the colony were very much at home; I therefore hastily set the hive down and marched on in the direction of Nashville, which city I quietly captured, and went into camp there. Nashville did not interpose as serious obstacles to my onward march as did that colony of bees. Those bees took a temporary abode in my jacket sleeve, my pants legs and the double seat of my cavalry trousers did not sufficiently protect my rear from vicious assaults. I made a very great mistake when I took off my hat and assaulted the bees with it, accepted as resulting from it when so as that movement gave the bees an opportunity to take possession of my hair, and with their heaviest bayonet pierce the top of my head. After the battle with the of bees was over I devoutly thanked God that my life was spared so as bravely and effectively as did that colony of bees, the South would have whipped us in 15 days. Those bees not only put me to flight, but stampeded the

MUSTERED OUT.

THE NATIONAL TRIBUNE will publish, without charge, brief notices of the deaths of soldiers of the war of the rebellion or other wars. We do this as a matter of general interest to survivors of these wars. THE NATIONAL TRIBUNE is the only publication having a large general circulation among those who participated in the war of the rebellion, and no other means is offered to the scattered survivors of regiments to learn of the deaths of companions-in-arms of the '60's. Comrades and others are invited to send to THE NATIONAL TRIBUNE, as soon after death as possible, a NATIONAL TRIBUNE, as soon after death as possible, a brief sketch, being particular to give date and place of death, company and regiment, date of enlistment, date of discharge, and other facts regarding service, and to state what family is left by the deceased. Further, the party sending sketch should state whether he was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and if so to what Post he belonged: or if a member of other Orders, state the names of these.
